

INTRODUCTORY STATEMENT

I have always loved making pictures. At Denison University, I majored in Fine Arts, concentrating in Printmaking. After college I went into graphic arts, both in New York City and San Francisco.

After 20 years in the business of advertising and design, I have recently discovered an enormous passion for the exact opposite type of creativity: Abstract Painting. Nothing digital. No client's objectives. No lowest common denominators. Just my painting.

My work expresses my pure creative urge truly unleashed. If I get out of my own way, and relinquish control, very compelling things happen. The themes I am working with are the essences of the natural elements in their glory: their power, beauty, simplicity and unbelievable complexity. I feel awe when contemplating these elements, and my work expresses that sense of awe. It equates to what I am coming to know as an "organic spirituality".
